It may also be said that being rich allows a person to enjoy the best upbringing possible. This usually results in an array of skills, of which sets the person above the rest. Many people I know, who have a less humble background, are brought up to be refined, and well educated people. Such character may give them an edge over others when seeking a job, or pursuing something. Most of our present day delinquents, might have come from poor backgrounds, with poor upbringing.

Those who think differently might believe that every man is born equal and that how our futures are, is not determined by anything else but ourselves.
